Making Connections

Seamless Transport: Making Connections

Dear Guests,

Seamlessness to transport is the physical expression of one of the megatrends of the 21st century: complete connectivity. Seamless transport is about better connecting people and markets, but also about linking sectors, businesses, citizens and technology. The transportation space has already been transformed by digitalization. How can we create seamless transport systems today?

To what extent is complete connectivity ultimately feasible? What approaches should be taken politically, institutionally, and technologically?

These are the issues that transport leaders from government, public administration, business and academia will explore at the International Transport Forum’s Annual Summit on 2-4 May 2012 in Leipzig, Germany. Through your participation in this unique global platform, you can help shape the transport policy agenda and set the tone of transport research and debate.

The Summit is also available on the website.
