The International Transport Forum’s 2012 Summit will be held in Leipzig, Germany on 2-4 May 2012 on the topic “Seamless Transport: Making Connections”. Transport Ministers and other leading names from industry, civil society and research, as well as the media, figure among the annual attendance of over 800 people. The Summit offers unique dissemination and networking opportunities for transport professionals, firms active in the consultancy domain and researchers from around the world.

Research Exhibit
International Transport Forum’s 2012 Summit will feature an exhibition of stands displaying recent research related to transport in a locale highly visible to Summit participants. The exhibition will be announced in the Summit programme and on the website, as well as through information displayed on-site. Dedicated poster presentation slots may also be organised during the Summit.

Candidates
Consultancy firms, research laboratories, research consortiums, universities, foundations and international organisations from a Forum member country* are invited to apply for participation in this research stand / poster exhibition.

Costs
A 350 euro fee will be charged to help towards recovering the costs of the research stand exhibit. Candidates will be asked to pay the reduced registration fee for researchers, as well as covering their own travel and accommodation costs.

Display units for posters, a table and seats, plus electricity supply and possibly a screen will be at the disposal of each presenter. Interested parties should complete a registration form describing the key aspects of their research specialisation and the areas of research they wish to exhibit (deadline 23 March 2012 - the number of places available is limited). If relevant, the connection to the Summit 2012 theme on “Seamless Transport: Making Connections” should be highlighted. A selection committee will choose those research stands and visually attractive posters which best draw attention to innovative research linked to the transport domain.
